

The Impact Series features crucial titles on a variety of topics, including denominations, doctrine, and cultural issues. With practical applications for Lutherans and other Christians, these books provide a greater understanding of our modern church and faith, all while pointing to the Gospel. This critical title looks at the roots of the Church Growth Movement in Evangelical/Reformed theology. It also examines man's innate desire to live a happy, moral life and whether he has the ability to decide for Christ. The author argues that this theology of glory must be countered with the theology of the cross, the doctrine of justification by faith, and the use of the means of grace.
