

Excerpt from Standards of the Department of Health and Sanitation of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, 1918A healthy and energetic force of workmen is as essential to the speedy construction of the ships as a well-laid-out yard, prompt delivery of materials labor-saving machinery or efficient methods of work. The building and operation of ships by the U. S. Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation is the greatest industrial task ever undertaken, and being a governmental activity, the hygienic and sanitary standards under which this work is carried on should be worthy of adoption by private industry. The health of the workers also has a very direct influence upon the cost of building ships, for a dollars worth of work should be obtained for every dollar paid in wages. This is not possible with employees in ill health or with lowered vitality. To obtain such conditions it is necessary that the principles of industrial sanitation as established by actual practice shall be clearly understood and strictly conformed to. This requires the expenditure of funds, but experience has clearly demonstrated that the investment pays dividends. The enormous increase in the shipbuilding industry to meet war needs has caused a constant influx of workmen into the shipyards who are unused to the rigor and exposure of shipbuilding. This condition demands unusual care to safeguard their vitality. The above conditions have been the guiding principles in the preparation of this bulletin, and it is hoped that the closest possible cooperation may be obtained between the shipyard managers and the Department of Health and Sanitation of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, whereby these problems may be met and worked out in a mutual spirit of purpose to speedily build ships.
